

Dr. Jane Freeman

Jane completed a BA and a BEd at Queen's University, an MA at the University of Warwick, and a PhD at the University of Toronto. Her areas of expertise are Shakespeare, classical rhetoric, and oral and written communication. She is the founding Director of the School of Graduate Studies' the Graduate Centre for Academic Communication (GCAC), a Senior Fellow of Massey College, a member of the Stratford Festival's Senate, a former Chair of Stratford's Education and Archives Committee, and a former board member of Massey College and of the Consortium of Graduate Communication. She completed a book in collaboration with Prof. Ursula Franklin, entitled Ursula Franklin Speaks: Thoughts and Afterthoughts, 1986–2012. A frequent lecturer at Stratford and for the McMaster Summer Seminar, Jane is delighted to be back with us again this year even if only online (for now!).
